Issue 5, May 2008

Countries all over the world celebrate Labor Day at different times of the year. Traditionally, it started as a celebration of the working class but later on also became a celebration of the end of summer. For most of us in Asia, this holiday is celebrated on May 1st, although regardless of the date it is important to remember and honor the efforts and accomplishments of all those who have made a contribution to the work force! Kudos to each and every one of us!!

Work started on another Servcorp office during the month of March and was finally completed on June 2, 2008. The new office is located at Level 24 Tower 3, China Central Place, No. 79 JianGuo Road, Chaoyang District, Beijing.

Official handover will take place on June 15, 2008 and its first day of operations will begin immediately on the day after.

Mike attended the CoreNet Global Summit held at San Diego, California last May 4, 2008. To increase our market exposure in the U.S. and Globally, psg Asia was one of the official sponsors of the aforementioned event wherein approximately 2,500 delegates composed of top officials and executives from various high profile multi-national organizations gathered to discuss relevant business trends and technologies.

psg Asia gives back

A donation was recently made to the Red Cross for the relief efforts of the Shichuan earthquake victims. We at psg also offer our deepest sympathies and support to all those affected by this tragedy.

ECO TRIVIA

Did you know?

The energy we save when we recycle one glass bottle is enough to light a traditional light bulb for four hours.
